"It was all of these, my children, but there was one incident that impressed itself upon me more than any of them. After a battle is well on a soldier comes under the influence of brute passion and is not in a mood to be affected by and is not in a mood to be affected by the barbarous scenes about him. But let him see some minute happening when he is caim and he revolor at war. The incident I refer to was this: "I was scouting in the Shemandoth valley. We had been sent out to recon-noiter with a view to finding out the lo-cation of Stonewall Jackson, who was cation of Stonewall Jaccson, who was here today, there tomorrow and nobody knew where the next day. I was then a private, and for what I did on that occasion I was made an officer, but for more than forty years I have regretted the act. We had dismounted on a high bluff overlooking a bit of road that wound around the mountain. Beneath us was a house that sauggled under some high trees and a rock back of it, with a few flowers in the front yard. It reminded me of the home I had left where my mother and near by the little were ordered to remount I noticed that the knot of the girth holding my Mc-Clellan saddle was insecure and stopped to fasten it. While I was doing so my comrades rode on. Just as I was about to mount I have specially attracted my attention, a super in his belt. Couriers bearing districtes usually carried them in their belts, and I knew that this young fel-low was a courier. If we could get that dispatch it might tell us some-thing about the enemy's whereabouts. My contrades were by this time out of sight, and I did not dure ride after them for fear of losing the messenger. I remained where I was resolved to get his dispatch and if of value carry it to the general myself.

THE PEOPLE OF PARIS.

moyements in times of revolution are issually generous and that they are best pleased to spend the days immediately following their triumph in boasting of their victory, laying down the law and playing at being great men. During that time it generally happens that some government or other is set up, the police return to their posts and the judge to his bench, and when at last our great men consent to step down to the better known and more valgar ground of petty and malicious humra passions they are no more vulgat ground of petty and mail-clous humes passions they are no longer able to do so, and are reduced to live simply like honest men. Be-sides, we have spent so many years in insurrections that there has arisen among us a kind of morality peculiar to times of disorder and a special code for days of rebellion. According to these exceptional laws, murder is tol-cerated and havoe permitted, but theft erated and havoc permitted, but theft is strengously forbidden, although this, whatever one may say, does not pre whatever one may say, does not prevent a good deal of robbery from occurring upon those days for the simple reason that society in a state of rebellion cannot be different from that at any other time, and it will always contain a number of rascals who as far as they are concerned scorn the morality of the main body and despise its point of honor when they are unobserved.—"Recollections of De Tocqueville."

TIDAL FLUX AND REFLUX.

Complicated Movements of the Bil-lows of the Oceans. Those who see the rise and fall of the tides in our Atlantic harbors seldom think of the wonderful course of the ocean waves which cause the tidal flux and reflux. Such billows not only cross the sea, but flow from ocean to ocean, and in this way complicated movements are set going.

Thus, for instance, once in every twelve hours the moon raises a tide

Sir John Mandeville saw all sorts of queer things and wrote about them in his celebrated book of travels. It was in 1530 that the veracious John visited a certain group of isles (yles he called them) which was inhabited by a race of one eyed giants. Of them he says: "In one of these yles ben folk of grate stature, as giantes, and they been hideous for to loke upon. An thei han but on eye, and that is in ye middyl of ye front." He also tells of another one of these "yles" inhabited by a race of one these "vies" inhabited by a race of one legged dwarfs, each having three eyes.

The First Astronomy

The First Astronomy were on the tops of towers of Babylon and the pyramids of Egypt. It is believed by many writers that both chasses of structure were erected for astronomical and the property of the tops of Job. As early as the time of Joh nearly 2,000 years before Christ, most of the stars had been divided into con-stellations. The writer of Job men-tions Arcturus, Orion and Pleiades as being familiar. The modern science dates from the labors of Copernicus, Tycho Brahe and Newton.
